DISPLAY No. 1.— ORAND INTRODUCTORY SPECTACLE

The Field of the Cloth of Gold

Under the Direction of ALBERT RINGLING.

Ballet under the Supervision of SIG. B. PERI.

The Field of the Cloth of Gold vividly embodies in changing scenes the meeting of Francis I. of France and Henry VIII. of England, together with the flower of the nobility, the ecclesiastics, the attachés of state, church and military of the period, to consummate a treaty for the maintenance of the peace of Europe. The meeting and all its multitude of details were arranged by Cardinal Woolsey. It occurred on the plains of Ardres, France, June, 1520, and eclipsed in magnificence, pomp and splendor any similar event in the history of the world. The lavish display, the magnificence of costumes, the utter recklessness of cost in appointments and prodigal expenditures in entertainment, resulted in turning the arid plains of Ardres into a veritable field of cloth of gold. The consummation of the signing of the treaty was celebrated by a feast of mirth, song, dancing and banqueting, and a most magnificent pageant, in which the youthful sovereigns of England and France strove to eclipse each other in dazzling displays of pomp and splendor. The pride of ambition, luxury of royalty and majesty of tradition were never more magnificently portrayed than in this imposing event.

MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP

A Word to Mothers

WHILE the advertisements of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup state precisely what the experienced nurse knew the syrup had done and would continue to do for infants, there is as much that might be said of what it does for mothers.

In allaying the pain of infants while teething, it insures to mothers peaceful days and restful nights.

In relieving infants of wind colic, it relieves mothers of one of their main causes for anxiety, and as a remedy for diarrhoea, it would seem to be the antidote for all maternal fears.

Hence, mothers can enjoy the home circle and the outside world as well while their infants thrive through the medium of Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup.
