ALWAYS CLOWNING AROUND

Happy Kellems is synonymous with pantomime and laughter. When one thinks or speaks of circus clowns, the name of Kellems is usually mentioned so quickly that it becomes a discussion of Kellems' rather than clowns.

Even his make-up portrays his art. He has no set pattern. The slightest change in tempo of the show or movement of the crowd can make a situation that Kellems will turn into a laugh. The Clown Prince of Cole Bros. is no ordinary funny man. He skirts the old routines, yet keeps the spirit of laughter and humor.

Among his greatness is ability to speak. While many clowns can pantomime brilliantly, Happy can take over as M.C. and give the Bob Hopes and Milton Berles a hard time.

He starred with the Olsen and Johnson show and was a feature on the famous television show, Buick Fireball. He has a terrific ability for change of pace both in expression and costume. His skill is best proven when he strikes a pose and without moving a finger or muscle is able to bring down thunderous roars of laughter.

Not that Kellems is the sole Cole Bros. clown. There are 14 brilliant humor vendors in the cast, one of the largest colonies of funny men in the world. And the competition that Happy presents, keeps the rest of the boys on their toes and makes the clowning around a show within the giant Cole Bros. spectacle.
